Medium Breed (3–6 lbs) 3–7 oz per day Giant Breed (10+ lbs) 6–12+ oz per day

*Control-feed rabbits during first three months of life to avoid digestive upsets. Adult rabbits tend to overeat and lose body condition by becoming too heavy. Therefore, adjust the feeding rate to maintain a desired weight. Does will need more food (even full feed if her litter is large) to maintain body condition during lactation. Check weight and body condition of rabbits regularly. Whenever rabbits are changed from one feeding program to another, it should be done over a 5 to 7 day period to avoid digestive upsets. During this time, mix the new food with the old, gradually increasing the amount of the new food while decreasing an equal amount of the old. This will allow time for the rabbit's intestinal microflora to adjust to any new food. Provide plenty of clean, fresh, cool water to animals at all times. Please consult each bag for specific feeding recommendations.

Research Proven Formulas

The natural diet of rabbits in the wild consists of plant leaves, stems, whole seeds and grains. But for rabbits to live a long, healthy life, and to perform at their best, they require additional nutrients beyond what is found in the wild. Purina® Rabbit formulations take a big step forward by providing research-proven formulas containing proteins with balanced amino acids for growth and development, essential fatty acids for lustrous fur and vitamins and minerals for strong immune health, bones and teeth. And all this in a cutting-edge whole-some formula that contains no fillers, added preservatives or artificial flavors:

- Vitamins and Minerals: For immune function and strong bones and teeth
- Carbohydrates: Provide balanced energy
- Protein: Balanced with amino acids for optimal growth
- Fiber: Ideal levels for optimal digestive tract function
- Wholesome Ingredients: No fillers, added preservatives or artificial flavors
- Nutritional Research: The foundation of all Purina® products

Top Quality Ingredients

We source only the best ingredients and only purchase those that meet our stringent quality standards. In fact, every year, thousands of tons of ingredients that don't meet our strict nutritional standards are sent away.
