

Tips for healthier, better-performing goats

- 1. Provide a stress-free environment for your animals. Stress makes any living creature more susceptible to disease, and goats are no exception. Always take the time to interact with your goats in a calm and low-stress manner.
- 2. Monitor your animal's feed consumption. Decreased appetite is an early sign of sickness. Healthy goats come up to the feed trough at every meal to eat.
- 3. Clean and disinfect housing, feeders and waterers in the pen routinely to reduce the chance of illness. Keep pens free of holes, debris and sharp edges to prevent injury and maintain soundness.
- 4. Develop a good working relationship with your veterinarian. Your vet can be a great adviser as you strive to keep your goat in tip-top shape.
- 5. Earn the animal's trust. A show goat needs to trust you, and trust is built when you work with the animal daily. It may be a long, slow process, but it is one that's essential in order to form a partnership with your project animal.

Every day, Elk Grove Milling strives to meet one goal:

Ensuring the health, wellness and happiness of your animals. Elk Grove Milling has been dedicated to producing complete animal feeds since 1982. # Goat Mix™

Feeding goats

The quality of your forage can vary every year, so if you want to ensure that your goats will thrive, consider feeding Goat Mix™. Goat Mix™ is specially formulated for goats with 16% protein and 3% fat in a 5/32" pellet. Goat Mix™ is a complete pelleted feed that contains all of the daily vitamin and mineral requirements a goat needs. Ammonium chloride is added to reduce incidences of urinary calculi in bucks.

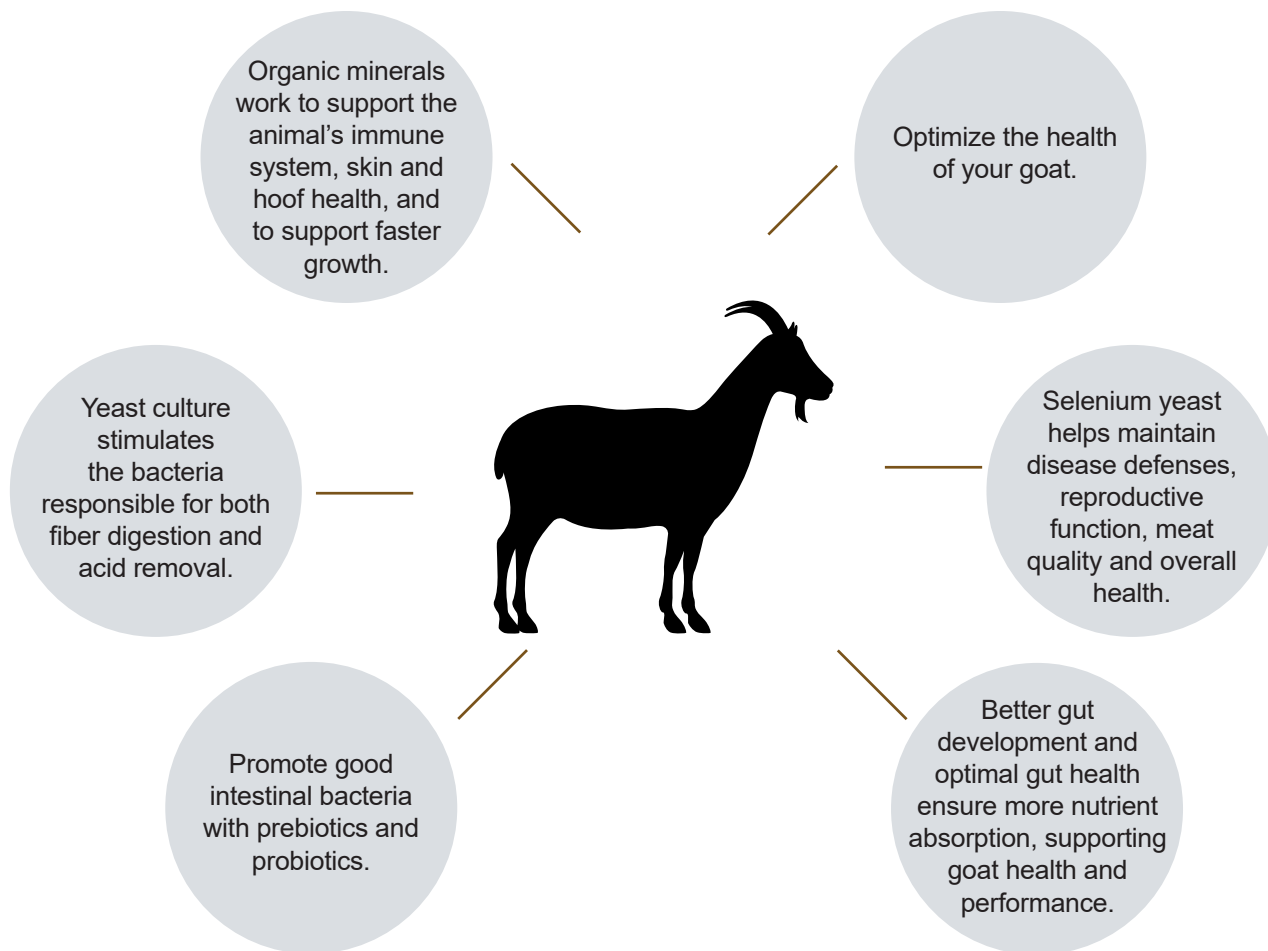

Feed 2.5 to 3 lbs. per 100 lbs. of the animal's weight per day.

Goat Mix™

Properly feeding your goats gives them the nutrition they need in order to grow and perform. Your feed should optimize your goat's health. Our Elk Grove Milling Goat Mix™ is specially formulated with premier ingredients to support the health of your goats and to help them reach their natural potential.
