

Why should I vaccinate my dog against coronavirus?

Coronavirus infection is a highly contagious disease of puppies that primarily attacks the intestinal tract and is more severe when combined with other viruses such as parvo. The disease is spread from dog to dog through contact with feces. Spectra 6 and Spectra 10 vaccines offer protection against coronavirus and are safe for use in puppies and dogs.

Why does Spectra 9 and Spectra 10 contain four types of leptos?

Emerging leptos diseases, including Leptospira grippityphosa and Leptospira pomona, are diagnosed in increasing numbers of dogs. The current vaccines that only offer protection against Leptospira canicola and Leptospira icterohaemorrhagiae don't protect against the two emerging leptos strains. Spectra 9 and Spectra 10 offer protection against these four leptos diseases.

My dog is indoors most of the time. Do I still need to vaccinate for leptos?

Leptospirosis can be found in dogs of all sizes, whether they spend time indoors or outdoors. Diagnosis of the disease has increased dramatically during the past 25 years and leptos is found in many urban areas due to drinking water contaminated by rodents and wildlife.

Do I need to vaccinate my 6-week old puppy every three weeks?

Puppies need multiple vaccinations that are age appropriate to be properly vaccinated and to prevent vaccine failure from maternal antibody interference. Be sure your 6-week old puppy receives a vaccination at least every three weeks until 18 weeks of age.

Is an annual booster needed?

Yes. Spectra and Focus vaccines are USDA-labeled and recommended for annual vaccination.
